METHODISM.

CLOSE OF THE CENTENNIAL YEAR.

SKETCH OF THE DENOMINATION.

ITS EFFORTS AND ITS ACHIEVEMENTS.

This article closes the centennial jubilee of American Methodism, last Sunday being the last Sabbath in the four hundredth year of its operations in this country. The General Conference which met in May, 1864, ordered that a Jubilee or anniversary should be observed, and appointed a committee to make all the arrangements.

The anniversary meetings began with the first Sunday of May, and have been held regularly to the present time.

Of the 20,000 churches of this denomination, not half attend such meetings, while others are general, but held in great numbers. In Tennessee, there were 1,000 meetings, and 1,000,000 persons participated in the holding and conducting of educational institutions, and the evangelizing of Ireland. It was estimated that $5,000,000 were raised for these purposes in some 200 meetings.

This was an average of over $25,000.

During the past few months also the pens of the principal men of Methodism have been busy in writing on the record of the century. The publishing house of the denomination has kept its five hundred bibles in giving these works to the public.

Among these works is the "Centenary of American Methodism and Operations," the First Century of American Methodism, by Rev. C. G. Conant. This latter is a complete record of the century, successive meetings of the conference, its efforts and its achievements.

Quotations taken in place of the annual meetings of the conference, and presented to the brotherhood from the North and the South.

It is freely opposed the conscription act, which provides for raising reinforcements for the army, and pay.

It is aimed to raise a man or a dollar to carry on the war, but end down the checkbooks, discourage subscriptions to the National loan, and claim for local taxation on the bonds for the purpose of depreciating the public credit, and rendering it impossible to raise money to support the army and pay.

It is violently opposed the tax law and tried desperately to prevent any money from being provided for the support of the impaled Government.

It pronounced the war to restore the Union an abolition war, and endeavored to inflame popular prejudice against the Government by the cry of "Negro equality."

It is aimed to and openly to resist the draft and prevent recruitments being sent to the army. It also gained enlistments and encouraged desertions from the army.

It is declared that in the Federal defeat it is not the war, nor in the Federal victory, but in the Northern victory, that the rebels could easily capture them, and the Government should provide for their safety.

It endeavored to bring on a conflict between the State of Ohio and the United States by naming Vice-President Johnson a man who had been found guilty of disloyalty to the Government.

It is received in National Convention the war as a failure and themselves as a peace party on the basis of a dissolved Union.

It declared that in the Federal defeat it is not the war, nor in the Federal victory, but in the Northern victory, that the rebels could easily capture them, and the Government should provide for their safety.
